The Four Pillars of GNH

- Sustainable and Equitable Socioeconomic Development: Ensuring equitable growth that benefits all citizens.
- Conservation of the Environment: Maintaining ecological integrity for future generations.

- Education programs emphasizing values such as compassion and community.

This approach has garnered international admiration and serves as a model for sustainable development.

- Balanced Growth: The government aims to prevent over-tourism that could threaten cultural and environmental integrity.

Despite successes, Bhutan faces challenges such as:

- Balancing economic growth with environmental and cultural preservation.

The nation continues to adapt its policies, reaffirming its commitment to sustainability.

- Manage urbanization in cities like Thimphu.

Economic Diversification

While hydropower and tourism are pillars of the economy, Bhutan is exploring other sectors such as:

- Organic agriculture.
- Handicrafts and textiles.
- Information technology.

Diversification aims to create resilient economic pathways that align with GNH principles.

Environmental Resilience

Climate change poses a significant threat to Bhutan's ecosystems, glaciers, and water sources.
